THE FOURTH WILL SEE A ROUSING CELEBRATION

How Independence Day Will Be Observed at Honolulu and at Pearl Harbor.

The Parade and Yacht Races--Outlook for the Aquatic Contest--Speaking, Reception and the Ball at the Capitol.

HOT For the boat races at Pearl Harbor! When the special train leaves the Honolulu depot this morning at 8:45 with the multitudes of boating and yachting enthusiasts there will be a moving mass of red and blue and blue and red, the blue signifying those whose sympathies are with the Healanis Boat Club, and the red the Myrtle Boat Club. Interest has run high on both sides and as usual both clubs are confident of victory. The crews rested on their oars last evening awaiting the dawning of the glorious Fourth of July to make the final test of their muscle before the thousands who will today line the shores of Pearl Harbor. The last trials were made several evenings ago, the full strength of the members of the four crews being reserved for today. Who is to triumph, the Blue or the Red, or whether it shall be all Blue or all Red, is yet to be decided. The weather around Ewa has been excellent during the week and all signs point to the harbor being in splendid surface for the test this morning.

The Myrtles are confident of winning. So are the Healanis. To meet a wearer of the red yesterday afternoon was only to hear of a crimson victory. Meet a Healanis and he would state positively that the air would be filled with blue to match the vault of heaven when the races were over. The uninitiated ones, those who have made up their minds that the one color or the other suits them best, are confident that their chosen colors are those of victory. The wise ones, however, refrain from showing any exuberance of spirits over the coming events, but nevertheless do some betting.

Betting was active yesterday but nowhere was there any evidence that odds were being given. It was an even go in all quarters, and this fact alone added zest to the interest that is being manifested in this year's regatta. Some declare that the public will see some of the best rowing ever made in Pearl Harbor. Others are positive that former records will be shaved down. Panama hats are one of the features of betting which have become popular and the chances are that this style of headgear is likely to become the fashionable mode after the races.

The following program has been arranged for today at Pearl Harbor:

THE HEALANIS—BLUES.

By Fred J. Church, Captain of the Healanis Boat Club.

IT'S a toss up, but I think we have the prize end of the toss. I think it's heads we win and tails they lose. We feel pretty certain that our boys are rowing in the best form and the practice rows indicate that the men are used to their shells and know what they have before them. They have made excellent time on the mile and a half course and the coach has put them to the test at every trial. The Healanis can be sure that the men behind the oars will do everything to keep the blue pennant at the peak.

THE MYRTLES—REDS.

By W. W. Harris, Captain of the Myrtle Boat Club.

IT'S anybody's race until the crew pulls down to the finish. There is always an element of chance in a boat race which doesn't enter into any other line of sport where one can figure out a finish definitely. Some might say that we are not rowing in good form. This might appear to be the case to a casual observer, but those who know the staying qualities of the boys, are aware that muscle offsets the appearance of bad form. Yes, we feel certain of a race or two.
